BEWARE THE SPEECH POLICE

These are dangerous times for free speech in America. Tech giants now control the news feeds for millions of citizens, and they have begun a coordinated campaign of unregulated censorship. The campaign began in an effort to suppress "fake news" and alleged Russian interference in our elections, but a lot of babies have been tossed out with the bathwater. Google tweaked its algorithms to depress search ranking for alternate sites, resulting in significant collateral damage—many legitimate and honored news sources, such as AlterNet and Consortium News, saw their traffic fall off a cliff.

Meanwhile, Facebook has hired the Atlantic Council's Digital Forensic Research Lab (DFRLab) to vet its news feeds. Among the Atlantic Council's donors are a who's who of defense contractors—Lockheed Martin, Raytheon, Northrop Grumman, Science Applications International Corporation—all with a vested interest in keeping the gravy train rolling for America's bloated military-industrial complex and in suppressing antiwar journalism. Facebook and Twitter have summarily banned hundreds of accounts, including ones devoted to exposing police brutality and American interventions overseas.

Last March the U.S. Special Operations Command held a conference, "Sovereignty in the Information Age," lamenting the internet's promotion of political dissent and advocating control and effective censorship via private tech companies like Google and Facebook. The Atlantic Council published a document summarizing these findings.

In addition, a new web browser extension, NewsGuard, is rapidly gaining popularity. It ranks news sites as green (reliable) or red (unreliable). NewsGuard's staff is composed of many seasoned journalists, and it does have an appeals process. But on the advisory board sit Tom Ridge, the first Secretary of Homeland Security; retired General Michael Hayden, former director of the CIA and NSA; and Richard Stengel, also a distinguished fellow with the Atlantic Council's DFRLab. Ridge and Hayden are primarily government insiders with no experience in journalism. The Daily Mail and the venerable Boing Boing website have already been branded with the scarlet letter. As Boing Boing's Xeni Jardin complained, "Who made you [NewsGuard] the truth squad?"

There is a huge problem here: Our mainstream media has long been afflicted with blind spots. If The New York Times publishes another bullshit story, like Judith Miller's notorious hyping of Iraq's WMDs, will it earn a red badge of warning from NewsGuard? When journalist Gary Webb exposed CIA complicity in the crack-cocaine epidemic of the '80s, The Times and Washington Post excoriated him, got him fired, drove him to suicide and never once apologized after his findings were corroborated later.

We need the alternative media to keep the mainstream honest. HUSTLER has always stood for untrammeled free speech. Despite some bad actors promoting disinformation, we cannot allow unelected think tank gurus and neocon warhawks to control and censor our primary news medium, the internet. Maybe it's time for the major tech companies to be regulated as a public utility, with democratic input.

DON'T KILL BABIES!
ABORTION IS ALWAYS WRONG!
J. Bouette

"Geesh, maybe sometimes choice is a good thing."

ANOTHER FOOLHARDY WAR

LIKE THE VIETNAM AND IRAQ FIASCOS, INVADING AFGHANISTAN IN THE NAME OF DEMOCRACY WILL INEVITABLY FAIL.

For many Americans, especially millennials, war has become nothing more than what's depicted in the make-believe world of a video game. Couch potatoes can joyously kill and be killed without risking life and limb. Meanwhile strategists in high places in our government get to wage real wars like the disastrous failure in Afghanistan—the longest war in U.S. history—without accountability, while defense industry contractors' profits soar. How convenient!

The Vietnam War was fought largely by drafted conscripts, whose families energetically questioned why their offspring were put in harm's way in a military campaign that made absolutely no sense. On the other hand, now that military service is voluntary, the war in Afghanistan has been reduced to a career option, often for the poor and underprivileged.

The United States lost the Vietnam War, and the enemy was restored to power. Beginning in March 1965, when the first brigade of Marines landed, the U.S.-inflicted madness in Southeast Asia couldn't escape notice, whereas for most Americans the carnage of our recent wars has been a nonevent.

When then-President Richard Nixon began negotiating the terms of the U.S. retreat from South Vietnam, there was much debate about whether or not the waste of human life—numbering around 4 million including carpet-bombed Vietnamese civilians—had been worth it. Of course, the answer couldn't be anything but a resounding "no" for any reasonable person who knew that "in addition to the civilians, almost 60,000 Americans were killed, many more were wounded, and the taxpayers paid the equivalent of $1 trillion for the fiasco. For the mighty United States, withdrawing its troops from Vietnam was a humiliating defeat. To interpret the outcome as a victory is a sick joke.

Tens of thousands of people—including more than 2,400 Americans—have been killed in Afghanistan since the U.S. responded to the 9/11 terrorist attacks by invading the country in October 2001 to oust al-Qaeda and the Taliban. Attempting to install democratic governments requires gobs of money. Since 9/11 more than $6 trillion has been wasted in Iraq and Afghanistan, where once again defeat is inevitable. Even a President as bellicose and volatile as Donald Trump has had to concede to negotiating a peace settlement with the Taliban, which the U.S. was once hell-bent on destroying.

Give Trump credit for facing a reality that his supposedly more moderate predecessors—George W. Bush and Barack Obama—insisted on denying. Like the dreaded Vietcong the U.S. fought on the enemy's own soil during the Vietnam War, the Taliban is an indigenous movement that this country could have dealt with peacefully without a prolonged occupation. Instead, the U.S. again conflated a local-based adversary with larger perceived threats to its own interests.

In the case of Vietnam, our government maintained that it was fighting the regional spread of international communism, as represented by mainland China, for which North Vietnam was a mere surrogate. That "domino theory" rationale was BS from the get-go. China had occupied Vietnam for a thousand years before the United States even existed, and nationalist enmity between China and North Vietnam persisted despite the shared Commie lingo of their propaganda.

After the North Vietnamese won their war with the far more powerful United States, and North and South Vietnam were united under communist rule, they didn't invade San Diego, California, or any domino nation, as Pentagon hawks had predicted. Instead, flush with defeating America's neocolonial power grab, the unified Vietnamese turned on their historic Chinese tormentors and tried to rearrange their mutual border to Vietnam's advantage. The two countries are still bickering over some meaningless islands both claim as a matter of foolish pride, while their real competition is for shelf space in our Walmarts and Costcos.

Someday soon we may be buying tidy-whities produced in Afghanistan, whose government will have to include the Taliban as a heavy hitter. And let's hope that the Afghan government will be deeply inhospitable to the return of al-Qaeda or any other gang of fringe Sunni terrorists financed by Saudi wealth and originally trained and imported into Afghanistan by the good ole USA.

Yes, the CIA and Pentagon ostensibly recruited Osama bin Laden's mujahideen to fight the Soviet Union, which invaded the country in 1979 and imposed a secular, pro-Soviet government. (Futilely battling the insurgents for nine years was a contributing factor in the breakup of the Soviet Union. The Russians had their own foolhardy Vietnam War.)

Rest assured the next time the CIA comes calling with yet another crazy scheme to import democracy by driving the populace into murderous mayhem, the Afghans in power will simply smile and offer their guests a bit of opium, which has always been their most valued export.

OF COURSE MEXICO ISN'T GOING TO PAY FOR ANY WALL! WHAT MORON HAS BEEN GOING AROUND, SPREADING THAT LIE ?!
WINNERS

AMERICANS ON THE SOUTHERN BORDER ARE TAKING A STAND AGAINST DONALD TRUMP'S RIO GRANDE LAND GRAB.

Most Americans residing along the border with Mexico are not clamoring for a wall, but many are resisting an invasion. Their existential menace is neither cartel drug-runners nor Central American families escaping poverty and crime to start a new life in "The Land of the Free." The threat to local Texans is the Trump Administration, which has empowered federal government thugs to displace citizens peacefully enjoying life on the U.S. side of the Rio Grande Valley.

The President kicked off the longest federal government shutdown in U.S. history last December with a new demand for $5.7 billion, after initially seeking only $1.6 billion, for hundreds of miles of new wall along the southern border. Meanwhile, residents of McAllen, Laredo and other South Texas cities were already preparing for battle—but not against a tide of asylum seekers.

Congress had previously approved 33 miles of new border walling in March 2018. After that, hundreds of landowners along the Rio Grande began receiving letters from U.S. Customs and Border Protection seeking permission to survey their property, the first step toward seizure under eminent domain.

Polls indicate that most of these property owners don't want Trump's wall and see no crisis to warrant it. I spoke with Ricky Garza, an attorney with the Texas Civil Rights Project, which is working with landowners threatened by eminent domain. "The only time I heard any talk about a crisis along the border," he bristled, "was when I turned on cable news."

According to Garza, who was born and raised in South Texas, "An overwhelming majority of people who actually live and work on the border oppose the border wall and oppose the militarization of our communities." He angrily cited tethered balloons known as aerostats, which were used in Iraq. They are now being "deployed in some neighborhoods in the Rio Grande Valley to surveil the border and, implicitly, all of us."

Garza continued, "The only crisis is coming from the administration's response itself. It's just another sad example of the federal government failing to understand the realities of life on the border and what it's really like for us just trying to live our lives in peace."

Amid the shutdown impasse, Trump flew to McAllen in January 2019 for a photo-op after declaring a "humanitarian crisis" on the border. The President toured a small section, insisted "a lot of the crime in our country is caused by what's coming through here" and added, "Whether it's steel or concrete, you don't care. We need a barrier."

But those who grew up in the area, and whose families have lived and worked there for generations, do care. They disagree with Trump. "You see the artificially created crisis that comes from Washington every few years," Garza lamented. "Unfortunately for border residents, this is just the latest example of Washington coming down, looking at the border and saying that we need something that the local community doesn't want."

From El Paso, Texas, to the Gulf of Mexico the border runs through the middle of the Rio Grande. That means any wall or fencing must be built on either the Mexican side or the U.S. side. The former is a nonstarter for Mexico, which has steadfastly refused to pay for the wall, as Trump promised on the campaign trail. Erecting the wall on U.S. soil would cut off hundreds of thousands of Americans from the Rio Grande, gutting the value of the land for those who have lived and prospered on and near the river's winding banks for decades.

Along one rural stretch—in Mission, Texas—the fight is one between church and state. Last year the federal government officially notified a Catholic diocese in South Texas that it intended to survey the acreage surrounding Mission's La Lomita Chapel, which is less than 800 feet from a bend in the Rio Grande. Back in the 19th century the chapel was part of a haven for missionaries circuiting the Rio Grande Valley by horseback.

According to Father Roy Snipes, the chapel sits in an area targeted for wall construction. Known locally as "The Cowboy Priest," he travels by boat from his home to the chapel to lead Friday services, praying for the registered historic site—featured on the city's official seal—to be spared. A border wall would violate Catholic teachings to protect migrants, Father Snipes maintains.

"It goes against the First Amendment [right of] freedom of religion," said a Brownsville lawyer representing the South Texas diocese in its battle to hold off the Feds.

"The border wall makes no sense for our communities," argued U.S. Representative Filemon Vela, a Rio Grande Valley Democrat. He called Trump's obsession a "senseless" fight.

Fellow House member Will Hurd, the only Republican lawmaker representing a border Congressional district in Texas, railed that the trumped-up "border crisis" is "a myth." He described the wall as "the most expensive and least effective way to do border security."

"There is border fencing that has already been built along the river," Garza told me. "There's some money that has already been appropriated and lands sought to be seized right now. There is already over a billion dollars appropriated for more border wall construction than we have now—something that the local community knows is not going to make any real difference or solve any perceived problem. Yet the government continues its path of destruction in my home."

Many political commentators have equated Trump's call to "Make America Great Again" with an edict to turn back the hands of progress. Who knew he wanted to turn it all the way back to battles over property rights in the Old West?

The government won't "take our land and the sacred spaces of the Rio Grande Valley without a fight," Ricky Garza vowed. "So we're going to be here as long as we have to, doing just that."

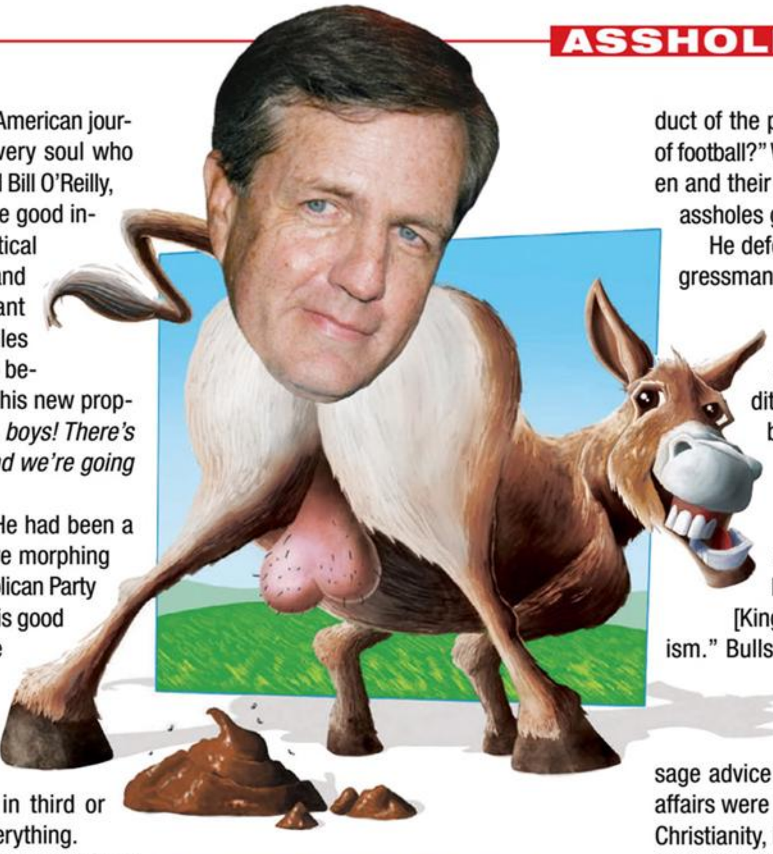
PAUL WOOD
HAPPY HOUR 5-7pm

"The drinks cost the same. We just don't talk about Trump."



BRIT HUME

Fox News, the Animal House of American journalism, ends up corrupting every soul who works there. Geraldo Rivera and Bill O'Reilly, in their younger, long-hair days, were good investigative journalists without a political ax to grind. They were honestly "fair and balanced," breaking many important stories and scandals. Then Roger Ailes showered them with huge salaries to become sycophantic talking heads for his new propaganda network. The sky's the limit, boys! There's oil in bamboozling the booboisie, and we're going to drill it!

Brit Hume jumped ship as well. He had been a decent journalist at ABC News before morphing into a right-wing ideologue and Republican Party booster at Fox. In an interview with his good buddy never-met-a-war-I-didn't-love Bill Kristol, Brit confessed that when Fox News was launched in 1996, CNN was number-one in the ratings. Coming in last, as an unknown rookie, Fox only hoped to survive in third or fourth place. Then 9/11 changed everything.

Brit recalls, "Much of the media was consumed with this hand-wringing about 'Why do they hate us, and what have we done wrong, and why has American foreign policy led us to this pass where we're under a terrorist attack'.... We started putting a little American flag—I put a little American flag in my lapel every night.... It was like picking up money off the street. I mean, much of the coverage was so noxious to so many people that we really picked audience. And when the dust settled after 9/11, Fox News Channel was number one in the ratings, and it has been there ever since."

No, there would be no questioning about exactly why a hijacker squad mostly from Saudi Arabia, our close Middle East ally, attacked us, or why Islamic jihadists really held a grudge, or why our continental air defenses blew it that day. Pin the flag on, saddle up, and let's roll for 20 years of nonstop warfare! Fox became the megaphone for the military-industrial complex and the oligarchy, while 17 veterans of our torturous wars commit suicide every day. 9/11 rescued George W. Bush from failure, it rescued Fox from the gutter, and it turned Brit Hume into a rich right-wing hero.

"Like picking up money off the street," he said. In case you think this was an excusable one-off, after the July 7 London terror attacks in 2005, he actually spouted this nugget: "My first thought when I heard—just on a personal basis, when I heard that there had been this attack and I saw the futures this morning, which were really in the tank, I thought, Hmm, time to buy." There you have it, blurted straight from the horse's ass chute: The first thought to cross his mind after 52 people were murdered is how the tragedy could boost his investment portfolio. This tells us what Fox News' motto should really be—Fearmongering for Fortune.

After Gretchen Carlson sued Roger Ailes for sexual harassment, ultimately leading to his resignation and exposing the whole sick misogynistic culture at Fox, Hume attacked her on Twitter: "Here's another suggestion. Why didn't she quit & sue instead of suing only after she got fired?" The fact is that Carlson and her attorney were planning the suit before she was summarily fired. And what difference does it make when she filed the suit? Two dozen women at Fox later detailed their own harassment. Before this outing and the whole #MeToo movement took off, scores of females had been intimidated into silence by the prevailing chauvinistic ethic: Speak out and your career is toast.

This has been Hume's schtick ever since: defending the good ole white boy network that has ruled America forever. During the Presidential debates he actually commented that Hillary Clinton was "not necessarily attractive." She was running for President, not Miss America, Asshole. But this is just what conservative sticks-in-the-mud do: Progress? We don't need no stinking progress! He once defended the infamous bully Chris Christie by stating that "in this sort of feminized atmosphere in which we exist today, guys who are masculine and muscular like that in their private conduct, kind of old-fashion tough guys, run some risk..." Right, Brit—behave like a fucking pig today, as Roger Ailes and all the other sleazy oinkers did, and it's much harder to get away with it. It's not a matter of "feminization," but a progressing culture that no longer tolerates flaming assholes.

Brit couldn't stand it when pro football hooligans were punished by the NFL for domestic violence abuses: "Since when is it the job of a sports league," he cried, "to police the private conduct or misconduct of the players off the field, outside the realm of football?" Well, ever since bruised, battered women and their supporters got sick of privileged, rich assholes getting away with it, dickwad.

He defended Steve King when the Iowa congressman whined, "White nationalist, white supremacist, Western civilization—how did that language become offensive?" While the whole rest of the punditocracy condemned King's remarks as blatantly racist, Brit cautioned that "we need to be careful flinging this term around, because...this great triumph of the civil rights movement making racism indefensible and intolerable has been weaponized.... I'm sorry, they [King's comments] did not amount to racism." Bullshit. If you've got more brains than a tapeworm, there is no other interpretation of "white supremacist."

Back in 2010 Brit offered some sage advice to Tiger Woods after his extramarital affairs were publicized: Convert from Buddhism to Christianity, because the former doesn't offer "the kind of forgiveness and redemption that is offered by the Christian faith." Tell that to Jimmy Swaggart, Dinesh D'Souza, the army of Catholic pedophile priests and Republican "family values" hypocrites caught fucking around like rabbits over the last two decades. Maybe they'd be better off as Buddhists, Muslims or pagan nature worshipers.

As the fireworks were exploding last July 4th, Brit launched a grenade to defend the old right-wing canard that "Democrats hate America." "Hate may be too strong a word," he tweeted in reply to a post on the conservative political blog Power Line, "but they sure don't love it." There's blind love and there's tough love, Brit. The former tolerates all kinds of crimes and abuses; the latter strives to correct our all too human failings and make a great nation better. Learn the fucking difference.

Years ago Brit sold his soul to rake in a fortune coddling ignorance and peddling deceitful propaganda. Since 9/11, when Fox took off, its viewers have persistently been rated as the most misinformed news audience, many still convinced that Saddam had WMDs and we found them! Fox and Brit Hume pioneered the degeneration of news into partisan spin and distracting infotainment. This makes Brit's hypocrisy especially galling.

About Trump's opponents, he said, "It horrifies them that he's President and it's leaked over into the coverage to the point where we see every day reporters who are supposed to not get into the opinion business letting opinions leak into their work." Pot, meet kettle. With reporters at every other network working overtime to correct Trump's daily tweetstorms of illiterate whoppers, Brit weeps that "fact-checking has become a branch of opinion journalism." From the man who helped pioneer the merger of opinion and news! It's time to saddle up and head off into the sunset, Asshole. That's our opinion. H

CIRCUS OF DEPRAVITY

Remember Wife Swap, the program where two women from diverse backgrounds traded families and homes for a couple weeks? As guilty pleasures go, the reality series was not totally without merit: Watching a Southern belle wake up at 3 a.m. to milk cows in the Midwest was equal parts schadenfreude and morbid curiosity. And compared to the circus of misery that is the reality TV landscape, it was practically high art. As to the lowest common denominator, here are the top reality TV shows racing to the bottom. We've hit peak depravity, people.

1. Naked Attraction: The U.K. dating show takes physical attraction to the outer limits, with both male and female contestants selecting hookups based on body type alone. Fully nude candidates are lined up and sized up before one lucky winner gets to go on a fully clothed date. At least they're honest about how shallow we can be.

2. Sex Box: This British series, which lasted an astonishing two seasons, pairs complete strangers, who then proceed to fuck inside a pitch-black box surrounded by a live studio audience. They emerge to discuss the sex in graphic detail. It's as insane and cringeworthy as you'd expect, like watching a slow-motion car crash that ends in awkward intercourse.

3. Sperm Race: What do you get when you combine Teutonic efficiency with sperm motility? Answer: a brand-new Porsche if your swimmers have what it takes. This German reality series pits a dozen guys and their genetic material in a race for fertilization. Administered by three doctors, the sperm—initially frozen, then chemically induced—is monitored on camera as it navigates its way toward the egg. As they say in Deutschland, das ist geil. Unsurprisingly, the show was not renewed.

4. Born in the Wild: After sex and sperm, it seems only logical that a reality series finds a way to exploit the miracle of childbirth. Forget hospitals though—where's the adventure in that? No, these expectant mothers venture deep into the forest, far away from pain meds and indoor plumbing, where they get back to basics and give birth the old-fashioned way: on camera, covered in dirt and ants.

5. Bridalplasty: Good taste is dead, and this was the nail in the coffin. Aired on E! for just one season, this abortion of a concept plumbs new depths of vain self-obsession. Twelve brides-to-be compete in a series of nuptial-themed challenges to win the grand prize: the wedding of their dreams and the plastic surgery of their choosing. It's a twisted celebration of body dysmorphia combined with the insanity of marrying someone who no longer looks like the person you fell in love with. Cue the apocalypse.

"I haven't spoken to my wife in years. I didn't want to interrupt her." —RODNEY DANGERFIELD, COMEDIAN

I'LL HAVE WHAT HE'S HAVING!

Instead, I have to beg. I'm married."

THE REAL FAKE NEWS: DOZENS HOSPITALIZED WITH GIULIANI POISONING

ATLANTA, GA—The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) is urging East Coast residents to avoid Rudolph Giuliani after an outbreak of mysterious illnesses was traced back to mucus secretions left by the President's lawyer.

Early signs of contamination include a rigid, Joker-like grimace, pathological lying, what doctor's call "Nosferatu eyes," and the uncontrollable urge to verbally incriminate one's closest friends and associates.

"The infections have, thus far, been restricted geographically between New York and Washington," says Melanie Trounce, spokesperson for the CDC. "But with the Giuliani population left unchecked, and the creature's propensity for verbal diarrhea, this dangerous vector of disease is far from contained."

"My wife asked me what was wrong, told me that I looked like an undead Cesar Romero," says Mitchell Webst, a plumber admitted to New York Presbyterian late last week. "Next thing you know, I woke up in this hospital bed, blathering on about the time my brother killed his—his first time doing stand-up. Yep, he crushed it—it being his set, not a hobo with his car."

"The Trump Administration has cut funding for every agency and program tasked with battling this horrible, though preventable disease," says Trounce. "All we can do now is urge people to block Rudy on Twitter and boil cable news before consumption."

At time of publication, five more cases have been confirmed, normally coherent individuals insisting that truth isn't truth and that the sky is falling, the sky is falling.

Fanfiction is a very broad term that encompasses all kinds of fantasy scenarios between characters, be they real or imagined. There's gay Teen Wolf fanfic, Marvel Universe fanfic and reams of erotic scenarios based on the wizarding world of Harry Potter and friends. But there's a dark side to every dream, and so we must contend with the existence of a banal and thoroughly unpalatable reality: Presidential fanfiction. Shudder.

As explained by Wired, if you can dream it, it exists. If you dare, plug "Trump," "Pence" and "fanfiction" into your search bar and grab the Dramamine, because this shit is guaranteed to make you vomit. Scenarios are…diverse in nature. In one tale Mike Pence gets pregnant with Trump's baby, while other stories explore the erotic possibilities of a world where Trump and Shrek are lovers.

As a genre, it may seem marginal—both in terms of popularity and taste—but keep in mind that nearly 90,000 people and counting have read a 63-chapter erotic novel detailing a fictional relationship between Donald Trump and Bernie Sanders.

Gratuitously detailed old-man sex notwithstanding, proponents claim it's a form of political commentary that predates the internet. According to Anne Jamison, an associate professor of English at the University of Utah, who researches fanfiction, pernicious prose has long been a tool for taking aim at moral decay in society and politics. From Marie Antoinette right up to the Lewinsky affair—itself "an entire genre of fanfiction during the '90s," says Jamison—writers have turned to fanfiction as a counternarrative to the mainstream version. "There was so much about semen stains and so little about her, but the fanfiction was much more focused on the interiority of the Monica Lewinsky character," she adds.

Similarly, Obama's boundary-busting Presidency lends itself to some fairly progressive storytelling, namely the prospect of a sexually fluid Head of State who has passionate affairs with Joe Biden and noted Canadian heartthrob Justin Trudeau—the latter subgenre is dubbed "Trubama." As to the nightmare-fuel that is a Trump/Putin/Shrek threesome, one can only hope this kind of content is a harbinger for impeachment. Politically righteous or not, this form of dissent is pure boner dust.

A SACK OF SHIT FOR A SACK OF SHIT

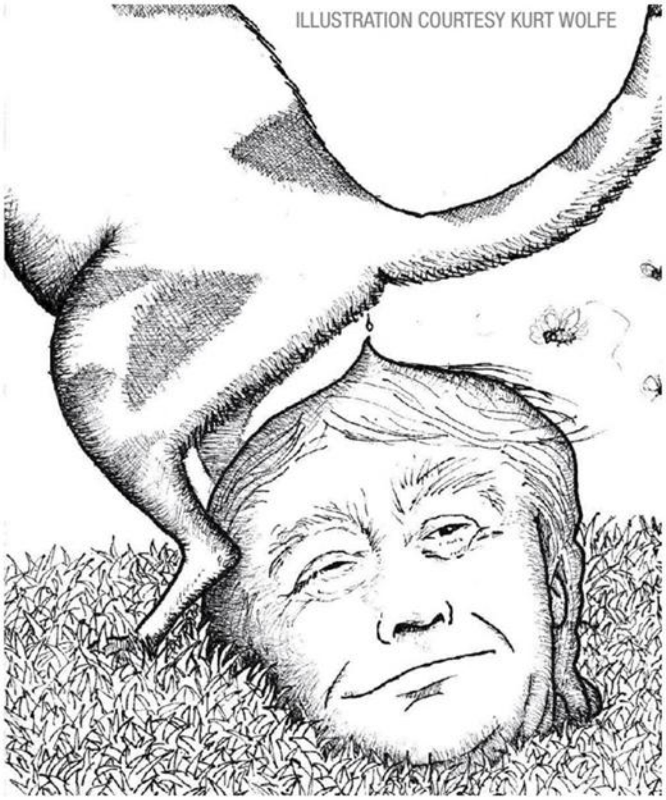

ILLUSTRATION COURTESY KURT WOLFE

Some ideas are so simple, so perfect that you can't help but be mad at yourself for not thinking of it first. Sometimes it's a new spin on an existing product—an innovation that elevates the mundane to new heights of cultural relevance and artistic merit. Where the rest of us see a pile of dog shit, people like Kurt Wolfe see a golden opportunity for scathing political commentary.

Wolfe, who lives in North Carolina, is a former Marine and the creator of these Donald Trump dog poop bags. Yes, for a modest price, you can pick up that steaming pile of filth with this steaming pile of shit—45's bloated, lie-filled face—and the world will be a better place for it.

The concept came to fruition when the artist entered a contest organized by the School For The Dogs in New York. Following a series of soul-crushing jobs, Wolfe went back to school, where he learned graphic design. Little did he know that those skills would help him clinch the winning entry and solidify his place as one of the great political satirists of our time.

The bag is made of a durable, 100% recycled plastic that comes in neat little rolls of 15 bags per roll. Unfolded, one unit measures 7 3/4" x 11 1/2"—ideal for a nice, large, steaming loaf or several cute little Tootsie Roll-type poops. Wolfe vouches for his sack's durability, saying it can easily accommodate a Great Dane-size turd. As you've no doubt guessed by now, Wolfe is no fan of our President. "I have detested Trump for decades, from housing discrimination in the '70s to the Central Park Five fiasco. I saw this contest as an opportunity to make fun of Trump in utilitarian fashion and jumped at the chance."

He's still getting set up online, but you can always check out his work on Facebook (in Google, search "Facebook" and "Kurtoons"). He also has samples of his work posted at kurtoonz.business.site. Quantities of his sacks are available via eBay—search under "pet supplies." Wolfe plans to print more bags in the very near future, as demand is more or less a given.

My favorite body part is my tongue. I love talking and tasting food and giving head. I'm a pretty hungry person, in general. Not just for food, but for everything—success, fun, sex. My friends tell me I'm loud, funny and caring, but I see myself as thoughtful and intuitive. It was a huge leap for me to leave my tiny town outside of Portland and move to Los Angeles. Now I work with Mark Spiegler, who books me for the best shoots with the best people and really looks out for me. I love my job. I fucking love my job!

"I'm single right now. I don't want a boyfriend, and I put that specifically in my Tinder profile. I'm looking for good chemistry and someone who understands that sometimes I don't text back. Also, if he can't fuck three times a night…well, then, peace out!"

CHERIE
ON TOP

Cherie DeVille is a woman of many talents: Physical therapist. Professional swing dancer. AVN's MILF Performer of the Year for the past two years running! And an aspiring politician who just might find herself running the country one day. HUSTLER spent a day with the multi-hyphenate beauty for a deep dive into her many-faceted life. Join us as we explore Cherie DeVille from every jaw-dropping angle.

INTERVIEW BY SHANE ANDALOU
PHOTOGRAPHY BY VICTOR LIGHTWORSHIP

It's approaching 11 a.m. on a Wednesday morning, and Cherie DeVille is in the backyard of her Southern California home, trying to wrangle her three pooches for a group photo op. "I don't know if they'll behave. They're poorly trained…or not trained. Rocket! Cincy!" DeVille calls. Eventually the beasts are gathered, resulting in a pose worthy of a Dog Fancy cover—if Dog Fancy had the foresight to feature porn stars. It may not be the first time that Cherie DeVille has gone doggy-style, but it ranks right up there with the most adorable.

HUSTLER: You grew up in the Washington, D.C., area. What was your upbringing like? Big family, small family, conservative?

CHERIE DEVILLE: A pretty small family. It was just my parents, my sister and I. Conservative? I mean, maybe for a city person. Not conservative the way the middle of the country is. I had rules and curfews and things I was supposed to eat and not eat. Whatever rules were there were maintained. But nothing crazy. I had normal rules for a normal kid. I was a good kid, got really good grades through high school, college, grad school.

You entered the industry a little later than most.

Oh, yeah, in my 30s.

Any advantages or disadvantages associated with that?

It would have been very different if I had gotten in when I was 18, but I don't know if it would have been different because of my age or because porn was so different then. I think coming into the porn industry as it is now, MILF is the best. In this market, being a MILF is much easier, because there's less competition. There's a high demand and a small talent pool to choose from, so I get to work whenever, and that's not the case for the teens. I don't think that's a statement of their talent or their beauty or anything, other than there's just 10,000 of them to choose from every day.

You've mentioned that in your personal life men and women have pretty much been on the menu throughout.

Women first, when I was really young. I lost my virginity to a man at 16 or 17 and to a woman early, yeah.

Do you prefer performing with women?

Yes. The scenes are just nicer. There are some good male performers and some terrible female performers, but for the most part the sex with women is more connected. I feel like it's more of a dance, and women really care about making you have pleasure, where with a man, it's more about making a good scene. With a man I'm more like, Am I really opened up? Are they seeing penetration? Am I doing the scene in the genre of this film? Am I being a mommy enough or a slut enough or... I feel like the themes with women are a little more romantic and allow a more natural flow, whereas with guys it's more, Well, we gotta do doggy, and then we gotta do missionary. It's a little more thinky, still good, but a little more thinky.

Is your family aware of your porn career?
I told them and my close friends before I started. Just because everybody's going to find out anyway. Everyone I cared about, I told.

What was their reaction?
If I had been 18, they would have freaked the fuck out, and it would have been a hard no. But I already had my doctorate. I'd worked as a physical therapist for 12 years at the time. Everything in my life was solid. They were like, "I don't like this, but you're a grown-up." I was clearly not losing my way, so they just asked, "Are you happy? Are you in a good place?" Those are the things that have always been the most important.

What's been the most interesting or fulfilling scene that you've done so far?
Oh, my God. There are so many really good ones. I'll just talk about stuff I think is pretty cool that I've done recently, because there are so many good ones, I would hate to leave anybody out. The most recent really cool project I've done is my first TS scene with Venus Lux, which was amazing. I've known Venus for years. We've made out a million times in private. Other performers, like OG performers, have told me that if they did a scene with a TS girl, they'd pretty much be blacklisted from the straight porn community. But now I feel like my name is big enough for me to step out and be like, "Listen, this is honestly something I've been waiting to do for years. I haven't been brave enough, not because I'm not brave enough to do TS, but I'm not brave enough to do it on film for you guys to see, because of the potential repercussions to my career."

It is pretty amazing, in porn and culture in general, how swiftly the conversation has shifted regarding trans issues.
Oh, yeah. Part of that is what has emboldened me to do it. Porn and mainstream culture aren't so separate, I think, especially in the advent of the internet. Who led the internet? Porn. I learned my sexuality by exploring myself and my partners, but millennials don't learn the same way. All of our porn is accessible on an unprecedented level. I was lucky to find a HUSTLER Magazine and masturbate to it, lucky to have one and be like, "That's so hot." These guys have seen more naked titties than all of our ancestors' titties combined. It's insane. They're learning their sexuality through our performances, so I think it is nice to provide variety. I'm sure there are some teenagers out there right now feeling ashamed of who they think they are. Maybe they want to transition to man or woman, or maybe they're attracted to a trans man or woman, and now they have some beautiful, nonfetishized, nonstigmatized content out there to enjoy and to masturbate to in a nice, positive way, I hope.

You've done a bit of BDSM stuff.
Oh, totally, yeah. I did that before boy-girl. I've always, since the very beginning, enjoyed that.

Is it something that carried over from your personal life?
It's something that I had always been super interested in, but other than a little spanking and verbal play, or maybe some wrist cuffs to the bed, I hadn't done much. Partially because of the pure investment in equipment. If you're going to get that kind of experience at home, it's a pretty intense investment of time and effort. For me to be able to shoot for some of the top BDSM companies, with the most gorgeous bondage furniture and world-famous handlers doing this stuff to me, that's an insane opportunity. At first, like a roller coaster, I'm like, "Should I do it? Should I try it?" I got addicted to the endorphins fast. >>

Let's talk about your other career.
Yes. I am also a physical therapist. Before porn, I worked full-time as an outpatient, which means people come to me. Orthopedic sports and spine therapist, that was my focus. Now that I do porn, my schedule is insane, so I do home health. That is where I go to the person's home, and insurance covers it, when they are not ill enough or physically hurt enough to be in the hospital setting. They're at home, maybe with nursing care, but they're really not physically or maybe emotionally ready to go to outpatient physical therapy. They can't drive there three, four, five times a week or maybe can't physically get out of bed or into the car. So those people in that transitional period are what us home health therapists scoop up.

Do you deal with a full array of ailments? Or do you have a specialty?
Before, athletes and spine. Not spinal cord, just back pain, neck pain. Now it's more like serious post-op, elderly patients, major accidents, paralysis, head injuries—things that are keeping them homebound—strokes.

Has there been anything particularly jarring to deal with emotionally?
When I was a student, one of my first internships was in a nursing home. You fall in love with your patients a little bit. You help them every day for hours, and then one passed naturally, and I cried for days. I didn't even go to work the next day. I was a mess, unreasonably, not the level of a medical professional. That's when I switched to sports and spine. I'm like, these people are not going to die on me. The times I feel really proud of myself are when I catch things that other medical professionals don't, not because of incompetence necessarily, but I spend a lot of time with patients.

Can you share an example of that?
They had sent someone in years ago for a sternocleidomastoid spasm. I'm looking at them, looking at their neck, and I'm like, "Oh, yeah, I see it twitching. That twitching is really rhythmic. That twitching's in time with your pulse. That's an aneurysm. We're calling the ambulance." Sometimes I do catch some great things and feel really happy.

That must be extremely fulfilling.
It's an incredibly rewarding job.

So you still practice physical therapy?
Yeah. Even though financially I wouldn't have to be a physical therapist, one, I love it. Two, I need to maintain my license, because this figure won't last forever. We all age out of porn for one reason or another, and unless I start making bazillions of dollars, I won't be retiring in the next five years.

Did you ever worry that your porn career might somehow damage your physical therapy career?
I probably won't ever be able to work for somebody else. I'll probably always have to run my own business, like I do now. The hospital chain I used to work for had—and many, many, many places do—a morality clause in your contract, and they all do thorough background checks, and I don't just mean criminal. Obviously, I don't have a criminal record, but they want to know who all of your employers have been lately and what you've been doing. That's fair, and they're allowed to ask those questions and choose their clientele and practitioners based on that. I think it's still harder to get a job as an ex-female porn performer than it is as a convict.

Have you ever had a guy try to get you to pleasure him in the guise of therapy? "Oh, I'm having trouble with my groin. Can you...?"
If I get even a hint that there are shenanigans, I'll send in a male colleague. I'll be like, "You know what? I don't know too much about that, but you know whose specialty that is? This guy. This guy right here is going to help you."

Do patients recognize you from your porn work?
Not yet. I think if I still worked in outpatient, maybe, but the people I treat now have more important shit to think about than where they might have seen me before. Then, also, I have makeup on right now and the lashes and the lips and the hair. I look like crap when I go to people's houses. They might think, That kind of looks like Cherie's much uglier sister, but I'm not going to say anything.

You've also worked as a lifeguard before. Any tales of Baywatch-type glory?

I wish. When I was a lifeguard, I was working at a beach in Cape Cod that's as placid as a lake. You'd have to really fuck your shit up to drown there. Then I worked, when I was an undergrad, in the pool. Nothing glorious.

And you've been a professional swing dancer?

Yes, yes. I taught lessons. I danced at the battleship Wisconsin's 50th anniversary. I danced for the opening of the World War II Memorial in D.C. I used to teach lessons. I traveled with a Lindy Hop dance troupe for a little while. Yeah, super fun.

The Lindy Hop? How old a soul are you?

I know, right? Dude, from my wardrobe, really old. I used to collect '40s patterns and make them with my mom so I could have all the right clothes, but in modern fabrics.

How did you get into swing dancing? It doesn't seem like there's a big call for that these days.

There's no call for it at all. It's just a complete work of passion. I started in college at a really terrible dance class. Loved it! Then went on every break. My parents were still living in D.C. at the time, so I went to D.C., where there's some amazing dancers. At first, I was just really dancing on spring break, stuff like that, whenever I was home, and a teeny bit at school. Then after college, I moved home for about four months, while I was getting my license, and danced a lot, and ever since then I've been hooked.

Have you ever incorporated your swing dance moves into a porn scene or sex in general?

Yeah, porn scenes. Do you remember Molly's Life? [Molly Cavalli] had a reality show. It's been over for a while. I did a swing dancing scene with her. I've done one with Kyle Mason. That's how I know he can swing dance. Those are the two that come to my mind as actually having dance footage in them.

Did I hear something about a 2020 Presidential bid?

Sadly, I feel like that ship is gone. I was getting good financial support in the beginning, and then everyone kind of dropped off. I got to the point where the Reform Party was onboard to do it. They had certain states where they were already on the ballot, so those states were good, but it was like seven states. It was not many. They needed me to get the petitions in all of the other states, but it was going to be a financial undertaking. I wasn't willing to spend the money just to be on a soapbox. Because there's no realistic way that I'm going to win for 100 reasons…I wasn't willing to pony up the ten grand to make it all the way or as far as I could. I just wasn't able to financially do it on my own. It was super fun though. I got some great, exciting interviews, and I got to maybe reach people that I hadn't before and make some comments on porn, sexuality, women and women's rights that I hope touched some people.

When you announced your Presidential bid, the rapper Coolio was your running mate. How does one enlist Coolio in one's political campaign?

By asking nicely. By having amazing breasts and asking nicely. No, I don't know. How does one with big tits ask for anything? No, just kidding.

Did you guys part ways before you decided to drop the campaign?

Yeah. He has a busy schedule. He has real shit to do, and this was cool at first. Then he's like, "You know what? I can't keep doing this."

What would your midterm report card be for the current resident of the Oval Office?

Oh, my God, I'm going to piss people off. I know half my fans, of >> course, are Democrats, and half are Republican, and I voted Republican a multitude of times in the past, so this is coming from a pretty bipartisan lady, right? If HUSTLER had a spokeswoman, and she was tweeting like he did, I think you'd be grotesquely embarrassed. And we're the United States. I would imagine that a pornographic magazine and the United States of America would have different criteria on what they would like their spokesperson to do, and yet I would imagine that a pornographic magazine would be appalled at some of his tweets. It's not okay for women. It's not okay for minorities. It's really not okay for anyone but his white cronies, and that's not America. We're a land of immigrants, and he doesn't represent us, in my opinion. I can't imagine a career in which his persona would be an appropriate spokesperson. I can't imagine one. Yet here we are.

What did you think of Stormy Daniels' impact on the political scene, with her accusations against Trump?
I think it was brave of her. I don't know that I would have been brave enough to stand out and be like, "Hey, this happened." I think that it ended up having quite a backlash, unfortunately. I don't know that it ended up being good for her, because people are really mean and hateful. And no one even took it seriously. It's just sad. They took it like they take it in the tabloids. I would have expected the Enquirer to have written stuff that The Times wrote. But at the same time our President tried to pay her off. Does nobody care?

People might be too numb to his shenanigans at this point.
That's probably it. Once you've announced that it's okay to grab them by the pussy, what else surprises you? That he was with multiple beautiful women? That he's trying to pay for their silence?

So what do you do when you're not filming porn, healing the ill, swing dancing or caring for your menagerie?
I play a ridiculous amount of video games. You see the multiple different consoles. Right now I'm obsessed with Red Dead Redemption II. The big problem in my life right now is the new Fallout just came out, and I'm not done with Red Dead Redemption. Do you buy Fallout and pretend you're going to finish Red Dead Redemption once it arrives, or do you wait and just fantasize about Fallout while playing Red Dead Redemption? I don't know.

Follow the two-time AVN MILF Performer of the Year—congratulations, Cherie!—on Twitter @CherieDeVille and on Instagram @CherieDeVilleXO. Thanks to Evolve Dance Studio in L.A. for the awesome shoot location.

CHERIE'S GUIDE TO STRONGER HARD-ONS AND MORE INTENSE ORGASMS

As a porn star, Cherie DeVille is an expert at giving men erections. As a licensed physical therapist, she has some rock-solid advice on how men can keep them.

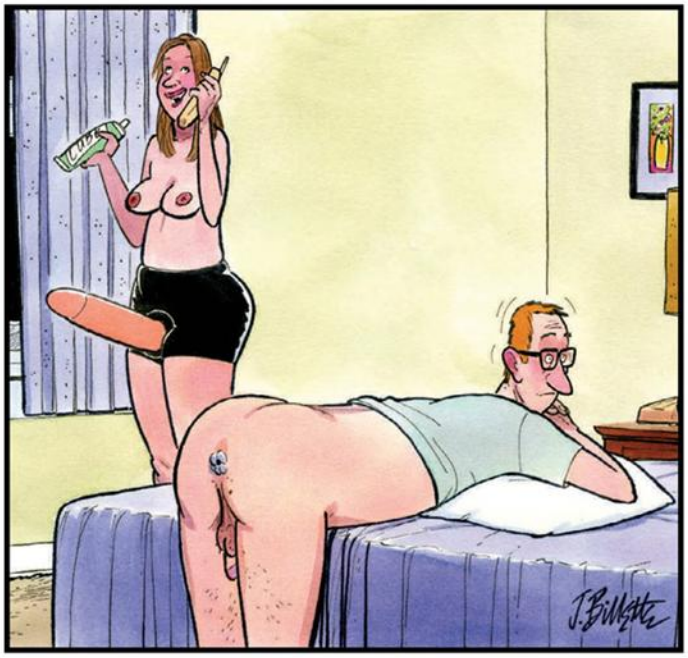
"Obviously, there are a lot of causes for erectile dysfunction, but in some cases, it's just pelvic-floor weakness," Cherie notes. So if you want to stay full-mast and orgasm with force, it might help to get things tight down under. "For men, a tight pelvic floor helps stop blood-flow return. So your dick is getting hard, blood is going into it, but without a tight pelvic floor, it's going to drain more easily. So it's going to be harder to maintain that erection. And then, when you come, the stronger—for men and women—those muscles are, the more forceful and good those orgasms are going to feel."

The first step, Cherie explains, is locating and exercising the target area. So, gentlemen, prepare to flex your taints (aka the area that taint your cock and taint your asshole). Cherie suggests trying to stop your flow of urine midstream as a preliminary exercise. "It's a great beginner's way to be like, 'Wait, where is this?' Also, tighten up the asshole, or try and twitch your dick. That is engaging your pelvic floor.

"You can start by doing it in a stationary position. Really focus. Maybe you're lying down. You're relaxed, you're never holding your breath, and you're tightening it, counting to five and then relaxing it," Cherie instructs, recommending a round of ten reps, with a five-second hold each time to start. "But never hold your breath," she emphasizes, "because that actually pushes down on the pelvic floor, stretching the muscles out into an elongated position. And you're trying to snug things up. So you want to just breathe smoothly and calmly."

After mastering the technique horizontally, Cherie says it's time to try it upright and mobile, standing and then walking: "Sex is a moving activity, so you need to be able to engage while in motion." And she gives you permission to go ahead and jerk off more while you work your taint. "If you're masturbating, you're not worried about performance; you're not worried about what your partner is going to think," Cherie points out. "Try masturbating, and see if you can do it or not. See if you can make your dick twitch a little bit. See if you can hold it. Then relax.

"With a good strengthening-exercise program, it can really make a big fucking difference in how much blood you can hold in your penis," Cherie concludes, "and how long you can stay hard. And it helps you control when you're going to pop."



"We'd love to come by for dinner, mother, but we're experimenting with Bob's prostate tonight!"

SEX SUPERSTARS:

BEWITCHING BRUNETTES

Back in our January issue HUSTLER featured Part One of our "Sex Superstars" series: "Blond Bombshells." We labored long and hard over our selections and, in fact, almost came to fisticuffs over differing opinions. For some reason we thought it would be easier to select the most popular dark-haired beauties of the past decade. For some reason we thought there would be less of them. We were so very, very wrong. The result: anger management training for all of us—and a bevy of the decade's most stunningly successful brunettes for you. Enjoy.

GINA VALENTINA

PHOTOGRAPHY BY

When I started doing porn, I knew that I wanted to be in this game for the long haul. That's why it's so important for me to interact with fans. I find that they are all just freaks like me, and I appreciate them for it! Luckily, I'm not shy. Even when I was a teen, I was bouncing around with different cliques. Anyone who wanted to party could and would be my friend. I'm a bubbly person. I love to entertain. Whether it's dancing or making jokes, I want people to smile. I want people to say, 'Damn, Gina is dope!'

"Sometimes I fuck high. There's nothing better than smoking a fat blunt, relaxing and getting into the moment. I like exploring my sexuality. I want to dominate and be dominated, and the more slapping, spanking and hair-pulling, the hotter the sex. When I fuck, I don't hold back."

THERE ONCE WAS A

An unemployed man grumbled to the receptionist, "When I go to the blood bank, a nurse draws the blood for me."

The receptionist snapped, "That's not how it works at a sperm bank."

Jack and Manny were shooting the shit at a bar one night. "I went for a routine checkup today," Jack told his pal. "Everything seemed to be going fine until I felt a finger going up my butt! You think I should change dentists?"

Mrs. Brown was having sex one afternoon while her husband was at work. Her 14-year-old son Richie came home early from school, saw what was going on in the bedroom and hid in the closet to watch.

Then Mr. Brown came home, and Mrs. Brown scooted her lover into the closet, not realizing that Richie was already in there. "Dark in here," the boy whispered.

The man said, "Yes, it is."

"I have a baseball," Richie told him. "Wanna buy it?"

"No, thanks," his mom's lover replied.

"My dad is outside," Richie warned.

"Okay, how much?"

"Two hundred and fifty bucks."

A few days later, Richie and his mom's lover were back in the closet again. "Dark in here," the boy whispered.

"Yes, it is," the man agreed.

"I have a baseball glove. Wanna buy it?"

"How much?"

"Seven hundred and fifty bucks," Richie replied.

A few weeks later Mr. Brown came home and said, "Grab your glove, Richie. Let's go outside and play catch."

"I can't," Richie responded. "I sold my baseball and glove."

"How much did you sell them for?" his dad asked.

"A thousand dollars," Richie owned up.

"Overcharging someone like that is a sin," God-fearing Mr. Brown bellowed. "I'm taking you to church right now so you can confess."

Once they arrived, Richie stepped into the confessional and closed the curtain. "Dark in here," he whispered.

"Don't start that shit, kid!" snarled the priest.

A dapper dude was sunbathing naked at the beach. For the sake of civility, and to keep his dong from getting sunburned, he placed a hat over his crotch. Soon a woman walked by and snickered, "If you were a gentleman, you'd lift your hat."

The sunbather raised an eyebrow and muttered, "If you weren't so ugly, ma'am, it would lift itself."

Hal and Ida were planning a second honeymoon to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary. Ida suggested, "Let's go to the same places we did on our first honeymoon."

"Uh-huh," Hal grunted.

"And," Ida continued, "we will do all the things that we did back then."

"Uh-huh," Hal repeated, still paying little attention to his babbling wife.

"And we'll make love just like we did on our first honeymoon," Ida gushed.

That perked Hal up. "Uh-huh, dear," he agreed. "But this time I get to sit on the side of the bed and yell, 'It's too fucking big! It's too fucking big!'"

MARCH FOR OUR LIVES

STUDENTS UNITE AGAINST THE NRA

Since the Colombine school slaughter 20 years ago, mass shootings have become a staple tragedy in American life. We have suffered 260 school shootings since the Sandy Hook massacre in Newtown, Connecticut, in 2012 and over 200 mass shootings in the first seven months of 2018, according to the Gun Violence Archive.

BY TRAVIS KELLY

Future historians will look back on this period in American history and wonder, how could a functioning democracy have tolerated it for so long? They will note that a large majority of Americans, including gun owners, favored more restrictive policies for ownership of the deadliest firearms. Yet progress was blocked by one rich and powerful organization, the National Rifle Association, acting largely as a surrogate lobby for a gun industry that fights any impediment to growing its market. As in so many other facets of our public life, campaign loot has drowned out the voice of the people.

But the mass shooting at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School (MSD) in Parkland, Florida, on February 14, 2018, might well have been the final straw. It inspired a new generation, not yet inured to these senseless tragedies, to cry out, "Enough already!" American high school students—who are often on the front lines of this bloodshed—have declared war on the NRA and its stranglehold on Congress with the March for Our Lives movement, led by Stoneman Douglas students David Hogg and Emma González.

Hogg was hunkered down in a classroom closet while Nikolas Cruz murdered 17 students and teachers and wounded 17 more in a six-minute rampage with an AR-15 semiautomatic rifle. Hogg had the presence of mind to record the hideout horror with his phone and then send the video to the local Sun Sentinel paper, where it soon went viral.

"WE DON'T NEED TO LISTEN TO PRESIDENT TRUMP. THE SCREAMS OF THE CHILDREN AND

He, along with his fellow survivor Emma González, emerged as articulate, outraged, impassioned voices of a generation terrified by this ceaseless carnage. On MSNBC and in other media interviews, Hogg stated his central motivation for speaking out: "People get used to what's going on, and that's not okay." On Bill Maher's show, he said, "We don't need to listen to President Trump. President Trump needs to listen to the screams of the children and the screams of this nation."

To amplify those screams so lawmakers would finally take notice, Hogg, González and 18 other Stoneman Douglas students founded the political action committee Never Again MSD and, with $4 million gathered in nationwide contributions, organized the estimated 800,000-strong March for Our Lives protest in Washington, D.C., and hundreds of affiliated rallies around the country last summer. The events were reminiscent of the March on Washington in 1963, where Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. delivered his "I have a dream" speech, which sparked a revolution and helped to end legalized segregation and the disenfranchisement of African-Americans.

Then, just like the Freedom Riders who ventured into the Deep South to register black voters and bear witness to persistent discrimination, the Never Again students hit the road in their own bus for a summer tour of 75 cities, encouraging young people to register and vote as if their lives depended on it—because they do. In the 2014 midterm election, a meager 20% of eligible people aged 18 to 29 voted. In 2018 that number rose 11 percentage points to reach one of the highest levels in decades. The voter drive was a resounding success.

Hogg also led die-ins at Publix supermarkets in Florida, protesting the company's campaign contributions to Republican gubernatorial candidate Adam Putnam, who was also raking in cash from the NRA. The student-led movement signifies more than just marches, noise and fleeting media events. There is a serious political strategy here to counter the long hegemony of the NRA, targeting politicians and companies in bed with that lobby, and it has already borne fruit.

Not long after the Parkland shooting, in March 2018, a new bill in the Florida legislature passed: It raised the minimum age for buying a firearm from 18 to 21, established waiting periods and background checks for all gun buyers, banned the sale or possession of bump stocks (like that used in the horrific Las Vegas concert shooting), provided money for mental health and security services in schools, enabled the regulated arming of school officials and gave law enforcement more power to seize firearms from people judged to be mentally unstable. From Washington to Florida, from Massachusetts to Utah, 50 similar gun-control laws were passed in response to March for Our Lives advocacy, including laws in 14 states run by Republican governors. Incredibly, the gun lobby's iron curtain blocking any meaningful reform had finally been breached.

Of course, the NRA has counterattacked, filing lawsuits against several states, including Florida, alleging that the Sunshine State's new minimum-age requirement violates gun purchasers' Second and Fourteenth Amendment rights, even though such a law would have prevented the MSD gunman from obtaining his AR-15. Nikolas Cruz was 18 when he bought the rifle that murdered those students and teachers. He wasn't old enough to buy a six-pack of beer, but he easily amassed an arsenal of ten guns. The story of Nikolas Cruz demonstrates the untenable state of gun regulation in America.

Before giving him up for adoption, Nikolas Cruz's birth mother, a recidivist criminal arrested 28 times, was busted for purchasing crack cocaine while she was pregnant with him. His adoptive parents had a difficult time with Nikolas: He shot neighborhood chickens with a pellet gun, bit a neighbor kid's ear, picked fights, threw rocks, vandalized property, pointed a handgun at his brother's head and an AR-15 at his mother's head, threatening to blow her brains out. Police and social services had been called to the home no less than 39 times. His adoptive father died when he was five; then his adoptive mother suddenly passed away in November 2017. Traumatically orphaned again, he lived with friends and relatives in the three months before the shooting.

A Florida Department of Children and Families report diagnosed him to be suffering from depression, attention-deficit/hyperactivity disorder (ADHD) and autism. He played video games up to 15 hours per day—most of them violent, according to a neighbor. He had told one of his middle school teachers, "I'm a bad kid. I want to kill." Another middle school teacher wrote this evaluation: "I strongly feel that Nikolas is a danger to the students and faculty at this school. I do not feel that he understands the difference between his violent video games and reality." In the months preceding the shooting, he spiraled out of control. Before being expelled for disciplinary reasons from Marjory Stoneman Douglas High, he decorated his backpack with racist slurs and symbols. He began posting explicit Snapchat videos, where he would cut his arms. YouTube comments linked to the username "nikolas cruz" included, "I wanna die Fighting killing shit ton of people" and "Im going to be a professional school shooter." The FBI was alerted to the last threat, but claims it was unable to track down the true identity of the author.

Clearly Cruz was a loudly ticking time bomb, raising red flags everywhere. Yet none of those flags showed up in his background checks for gun purchases. Nor did law enforcement have the authority to confiscate the guns he already possessed. The same story has been repeated over and over. This situation has been partially rectified with the new "red flag" laws passed in Florida and in some other states, but alone they are insufficient to stop this bloody plague. Comprehensive reform in all 50 states is mandatory. There is no single magic-bullet cure to assuage the hemorrhaging. Hence, the March for Our Lives website advocates a ten-point policy agenda:

PRESIDENT TRUMP NEEDS TO LISTEN TO THE SCREAMS OF THIS NATION."

UNIVERSAL BACKGROUND CHECKS

Felons, gang members and others prohibited from owning guns are able to do end runs around the law in many states through unregulated private sales and the gun show loophole. Over 90% of Americans support universal background checks. The only reason for not closing these deadly loopholes: It would pose a minor inconvenience to gun traders.

EXTREME RISK PROTECTION ORDERS, AKA "RED FLAG" LAWS

Individuals going through a crisis, posing a risk to themselves, family members or the general public, must forfeit their right to possess firearms, at least temporarily. Such a law would have clearly identified Nikolas Cruz as a threat, and the many firearms he possessed could have been confiscated before he made good on his murderous intentions. Several states have passed such laws in the wake of the Parkland shooting.

DISARM ALL DOMESTIC ABUSERS

Current laws ban some domestic abusers from owning guns, but Congress needs to close loopholes allowing dating-partner abusers, individuals convicted of stalking and those subject to a temporary restraining order to continue possessing guns. The right to life of innocent persons must supersede the Second Amendment rights of those posing threats of murder and mayhem. We now know too much about how frequently such conflicts metastasize into murder. In fact, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) published a report in 2017 indicating that more than half of female homicide victims were killed by intimate partners.

ELIMINATE ABSURD RESTRICTIONS ON THE ATF

The federal agency with the authority to regulate the gun industry has been handcuffed from doing its job—prohibited from digitizing records of gun sales or requiring gun dealers to perform annual inventories to ensure that no guns are missing.

STRONGER GUN TRAFFICKING LAWS

States with weak gun laws bleed guns into states with stronger laws, effectively circumventing legislation. Currently there is no federal law prohibiting such gun trafficking. With better ATF tracking of sales and inventories, this deadly trade should be made illegal and end.

HIGH-CAPACITY MAGAZINE BANS

Magazines holding more than ten rounds only serve one purpose: combat engagements against platoons of armed enemies. Studies indicate that higher-capacity magazines are not necessary for personal protection. In an analysis of 482 self-defense shootings by civilians from 1997 to 2001, professional gun trainer Claude Werner found that the average number of shots fired was 2.2; the median was 2; and there were only three cases where the defender reloaded, one of which involved an escaped lion. Werner concluded that a small-caliber weapon was adequate for the vast majority of self-defense scenarios and that "the perceived need for massive quantities of ammo, reloading and precision shooting at distance is largely a [figment] of people's imaginations."

LIMIT FIREPOWER ON THE STREETS

Resurrect the assault-weapons ban instituted under Bill Clinton. Semiautomatic rifles with high-capacity magazines are designed for the battlefield, under the control of military forces, not civilian life. For the weapons already out there, buyback programs and/or registration should be implemented.

FUNDING FOR INTERVENTION PROGRAMS

Federal, state and local authorities should invest in intervention programs targeting the root causes of gun violence, especially in blighted neighborhoods and cities. Many such intervention programs have already proven effective.

FUND GUN VIOLENCE RESEARCH

Prior to 1996 the CDC funded research into gun violence as a public health issue. But after studies demonstrated that the prevalence of guns in the home increased the risk of homicide, Republican legislators in the pockets of the NRA counterattacked. They added an amendment, which stripped funding for gun research, to an omnibus spending bill. Named after the provision's author, the Dickey Amendment mandated that "none of the funds made available for injury prevention and control at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention may be used to advocate or promote gun control." The funding was eventually reinstated, but has declined ever since. Of course, the NRA wants to keep us in the dark, because scientific research would make an unambiguous case for the efficacy of more restrictions.

SAFE STORAGE AND MANDATORY THEFT REPORTING

While many gun owners use responsible storage practices, an estimated 4.6 million children live in homes with unsecured guns, contributing to accidental deaths. There are few laws in place to ensure that guns are stored securely when not in use. Seattle passed just such a safe-storage ordinance last July, mandating that if a firearm is not >>

"under the control of the owner or other lawfully authorized user," it must be stored in a locked container, and if a child or "prohibited person" uses an improperly stored firearm, the fine goes from $500 to $1,000 and up to $10,000 if the weapon is used in the commission of a crime. If a gun is stolen, the owner must report the theft to the police within 24 hours. Predictably the NRA sued Seattle, arguing that the ordinance violates the state's sole authority to regulate firearms. That prompted this reply from Seattle mayor Jenny Durkan: "While they go to court—kids go to the hospital. We can't prevent every gun death or injury; we can take steps to help prevent tragedies." Last October a King County judge tossed out the NRA's suit.

The gun organization and its legion of fire-breathing fundamentalists simply refuse to acknowledge the terrible costs of their blind obsession, reflexively opposing every single legislative initiative to reduce the body count. The threadbare "slippery slope" argument—that any new gun law is a conspiratorial first step toward the total confiscation and abolition of guns—is just paranoid hyperbole ginned up to keep the terrified flock's donations flowing into NRA coffers and profits soaring for gun manufacturers and dealers. It's a sick symbiotic relationship.

David Hogg adamantly insists that abolishing the Second Amendment is not the purpose of the Never Again MSD movement. Contradicting the ludicrous rants of NRA spokesperson Dana Loesch ("Many in legacy media love mass shootings" because "crying white mothers are ratings gold"), Hogg says, "She's not serving the people of the NRA, because the people that are joining the NRA, 99.9% of them are amazing people that just want to be safe, responsible gun owners. And I fully can support that."

Loesch, Wayne LaPierre and company are furious because the tide is slowly but surely turning against them. After a nationwide campaign by Guns Down America, FedEx and 28 other companies terminated their special deals and discounts with the NRA, including major car rental companies, airlines, banks and hotel chains. Last August Fortune magazine reported that the NRA was in "deep financial trouble" after New York governor Andrew Cuomo persuaded some top financial service providers, banks and insurance companies to terminate business with the organization, whose leaders now whine that they will be forced to suspend magazine publishing and NRA TV, reduce rallies and shutter some offices. Politicians are feeling the heat too. Thanks to David Hogg and company, those who receive multimillion-dollar campaign contributions from the NRA are now in the bull's-eye of heightened public scrutiny—blatant blood money has become a political liability.

Conducted on multiple fronts, this new campaign has the once invincible lobby reeling. All of this is a sea change in American politics—a sudden, unexpected shift from the past years of obstinate complacency. When Rosa Parks refused to give up her seat on a Montgomery bus in 1955, that simple act of defiance catalyzed a revolution. David Hogg has played a similar role in this revolution. He and his family have been targeted with absurd conspiracy theories because his father is a retired FBI agent. He has also received a blizzard of death threats—"Fuck with the NRA, and you'll be DOA." But he remains undeterred: "The pathetic fuckers that want to keep killing our children, they could have blood from children spattered all over their faces and they wouldn't take action because they all still see these dollar signs. If somebody is stupid enough to try anything on us, that will make the movement even stronger."

Hogg's nemesis is Ted Nugent, now completely unhinged by the recent advances of gun control legislation. "[David Hogg] has been brainwashed, it's tragic," says Ted. "These poor children, I'm afraid to say this and it hurts me to say this, but the evidence is irrefutable, they have no soul." He argues that the .223 round used in most AR-15 semiautomatic rifles is "a feeble round that it's illegal to hunt deer with in 30-some states." True: At ranges of 200 to 300 yards, the .30-06 and .308 rounds formerly used by the military pack far more punch. But the military ditched those rounds for the smaller, lighter .223 round precisely because studies determined that it was better suited for close-quarters combat—not taking down a single deer, but for mowing down multiple human targets at ranges under 100 yards with 20- to 30-round clips. And so it has become the favorite of mass murderers. As Nikolas Cruz stated in a video, "With the power of my AR-15, you will all know who I am." Aside from blasting zombies in a hypothetical apocalypse or playing Rambo in the woods, there is simply no necessity for such weapons in the hands of civilians.

Nugent and pals make valid arguments about the general utility of guns for self-defense, hunting and recreation. But if Nugent were to do some honest introspection, he would admit this deeper truth: Guns have become an idol to his crowd—passionate hobbyists so blindly in love with their sexy big-boy toys that the immense suffering of firearm victims is never weighed in the greater balance of things. And for all their flag-waving, they have little faith in American democracy, forever hyperventilating about "tyranny" to justify their lust for the unhampered collecting and shooting of firearms.

No, Ted, this evidence is irrefutable: Gripped by an obsessive addiction, you fight reasonable new gun controls at every turn. But your monstrous selfish addiction will no longer dictate a nation fed up with its loved ones being routinely blown to bits.

LESBIAN MILF DOCTORS

HUSTLER VIDEO. DIRECTOR: B. SKOW. STARRING: ISABELLA NICE, DANA DEARMOND, PAIGE OWENS, RICHELLE RYAN, EMBER SNOW, REAGAN FOXX, DARCIE DOLCE & SERENE SIREN.

While America's broken healthcare system has been debated endlessly to no avail, Lesbian MILF Doctors offers an alternate solution that will keep users' laps in fine fettle. Paige Owens is a fresh-faced dirty blonde who accidentally swallows the engagement ring her beau hid in a cake. Unable to excrete the ring through her pert pooper, Owens visits seasoned practitioner Richelle Ryan, who's reminiscent of a Married...With Children-era Katey Sagal. Ryan informs Owens that the ring has somehow migrated to her vagina—the medical logic is questionable at best, but the allure of Owens splayed out naked, with her feet planted in stirrups, is quite genuine. Ryan's bedside manner is impressive as she convinces Owens to confide her lesbian urges. A highly invasive procedure ensues, as Dr. Ryan lubes Owens' chassis and performs a four-fingered probe of her patient's snatch while thumb-wrestling her asshole for good measure. Owens, for her part, digs her fingers into Ryan's snatch with the frenzied greed of a Big Pharma executive fleecing patients. Comely Asian chick Ember Snow is a special treat, like the lollipop you receive from the doctor after enduring a shot without crying. Snow visits the doc with an uncontrollable itch, which healing angel Reagan Foxx treats by pushing ice cubes up her twat. Lesbian MILF Doctors will leave viewers feeling feverish—but in a good way. DP ME VOL. 8

HARDX. DIRECTOR: MASON. STARRING: MIA MALKOVA, IVY LEBELLE, KIRA NOIR, FALLON WEST, MICK BLUE, MARKUS DUPREE, JOHN STRONG & RAMON NOMAR.

Those who don't mind sharing a tasty dish with a buddy even if their forks and knives clink against each other on occasion will find much to savor in DP Me Vol. 8. Things kick off with Mia Malkova, a blonde who's pretty enough to be a weather girl and who boasts a full, rubbery rump that resembles two incredibly beautiful bowling balls. Malkova drops to her knees for a thorough bout of tonsil-jousting between a pair of girder-groined cocksmiths. Then, without a single lick to her vagina, her partners launch a dual-donged assault on her nethers, and Malkova is promptly spit-roasted and folded like a cheap suit. She is transformed into a human pincushion—her mouth says "Yes," but her facial expression reads, "Holy fuck, I feel like my butt is giving birth to a cantaloupe." Quality takes a nosedive from there, in the zaftig, beak-schnozzed form of Ivy Lebelle, whose tits look like they might have been chiseled from granite. Luckily, spunky, dusky-skinned Kira Noir is next, who has her asshole crammed with two sperm-shooting sausages simultaneously. DP Me Vol. 8 will bring double pleasure to some viewers and elicit a "Don't, please" from others. —P.D.R.

WICKED PICTURES. DIRECTOR: AXEL BRAUN. STARRING: CHARLOTTE STOKELY, SABINA ROUGE, ELENA KOSHKA, LAUREN PHILLIPS, JENNIFER WHITE, SEPTEMBER REIGN, IVY JONES, BRENNA SPARKS, ZOEY FOXX & AIDRA FOX.

With the #MeToo movement sending every human with a dick running for the nearest safe space lest an errant glance thrust him balls-first into pariah status, Axel Braun's Girlfest offers a welcome respite to kick back and let the distaff half of the species work things out amongst themselves. This is an Axel Braun joint, so quality production values are expected. This title doesn't disappoint on that front, kicking off with a stylish intro marked by tasteful camerawork and a vaguely Middle Eastern soundtrack. But after the dainty setup, it's all tooth and well-manicured claw as "lesbian authority" Charlotte Stokely and Sabina Rouge face off in the erotic Thunderdome. Fresh-faced brunette Rouge, who brings to mind a young Mila Kunis, opens her legs like flower petals to the morning sun as Stokely greedily feasts on her cunt honey. Rouge, in turn, vigorously bounces her ass on Stokely's tongue. With her bright blue eyes, fine features and wavy hair, Elena Koshka should probably be strutting down a catwalk instead of giving Lauren Phillips a carnal workout, but here she is, and we're all the better for it. Koshka slaps Phillips' pussy like she's interrogating a hostile perp before burrowing her hand deep into Phillips' crotch crevice. Raw and yet somehow elegant, Axel Braun's Girlfest is worthy of a jackfest. —P.D.R

"I'm open to every opportunity to experience something new," proclaims Chloe Lamoure, 26, a nutritionist and personal trainer from Košice, Slovakia. "I'm very funny, uninhibited and open-minded," the 5-foot-6 Eurobabe tells us. "Most days I'm sharing my knowledge about how to eat and exercise right. Then one day I'm sharing my body by posing nude for HUSTLER Magazine." Chloe is dedicated to staying in shape and getting away from Košice. "I think that life isn't meant to be lived in only one place," she avows. "I want to travel as often as I can and as far as I can." Chloe, who's titillated her fans with a handful of over-the-top XXX vids, wants to go as far as she can in the adult biz too."Fitness pageants allow me to show off the rewards of rigorous training and a healthy lifestyle," she concludes. "But I really get off on being watched while I'm sexercising. Cocks get a thorough workout when I'm around."

HONEY BUNS

Makawao, Hawaii, doesn't have any traffic lights, but it boasts an inhabitant who can light up a room—not to mention Beaver Hunt. "I like to think I have the best booty on Maui," asserts Honey Buns, 22, a "spunky" receptionist and Jane-of-all-trades. "A photographer I met told me about HUSTLER, and I said, 'Sign me up, mister.' I was ready to show the world all of my curves." The 5-foot-2 newbie reveals a little more: "I like drawing, reading, hiking, Beyoncé and watching Breaking Bad and Game of Thrones." Then Honey Buns gets to the nitty-gritty: "I'm bi and kinda obedient." We're compelled to ask about butt sex. "It's okay sometimes," Honey Buns readily replies, "but I have to ease into it at first."

That's why I chose to be a legal courtesan at the Love Ranch North [near Carson City, Nevada]. I'm sweet, bubbly, vivacious, sensual, compassionate and playfully seductive. My personal preference with a man is the four Fs: being fucked on all fours, forcefully and fluidly. FOXI WYLD

"Being nude is nothing to be ashamed of, no matter what you look like," professes Foxi Wyld, 26, an aspiring aircraft maintenance technician from Walnut, California. "The human body is amazing and beautiful. We all should be able to feel comfortable in our own skin." No wonder Foxi describes herself as "open-minded, adventurous and resolute." The 5-foot-2 music aficionada—"I bump everything from punk and '60s rock to R&B and pop, even classical to EDM"—makes the most of every moment. "I play piano, sing, draw, paint and craft," Foxi explains. "I also like to garden and cook, and I enjoy camping with my dog and friends." Her sex life is equally diverse: "I'm bi," the avid role-player fesses up, "and I love to explore many fantasies and fetishes, especially submissive BDSM." Foxi is truly a model citizen: "One of my missions is to break down harmful social constructs, like body-shaming and taboo sexual preferences. I'm also passionate about sustainability and nature conservation, so I'm always making changes toward a more natural and cohesive lifestyle. I hope to inspire people to live consciously as well. Thank you for taking the time to get to know me!" —Photos by Wade Eno

"My man is as open-minded as I am. He thinks my being in HUSTLER is pretty hot!"

Facebook.com/FoxiWyld
Website: FoxiWyld.com

"One of my fantasies is to be a pet on a leash, led around the house—or even outdoors—and given commands to obey. I also fantasize about doing sexual things with someone in public or in a place where we may get caught."

TURBO-D
HERBAL BLEND
60 TABLETS

American Indians discovered miracle drugs in nature; aspirin in birch bark, quinine in cinchona, digitalis in fox glove and DAMIANA, which they used to stimulate long, strong erections. Chinese used GINSENG to increase sexual power, while Central Americans used sarsaparllia in the same way. Our formula supplants ALL THESE LEGENDARY PRODUCTS in a single capsule for daily use. We make no claim TURBO-D is an aphrodisiac, but we've had many repeat customers since 1974. If you have erection problems, try it. You won't be sorry.

DO YOU WANT THE SEX POWER OF A BULL?

Throughout the civilized world daily doses of natural substances called Tocopherol are given to breeding bulls to increase their sexual performance. Meaning quicker repeating erections and more powerful orgasms. This is not just a theory. It has been shown in agricultural laboratory tests that when bulls are given tocopherol on a steady basis they actually impregnate more cows. Tocopherol increases their DESIRE and their ABILITY to copulate. This phenomenon has not been conclusively demonstrated in humans...but if you'd like to WANT IT MORE and DO IT MORE...if you'd like a BIGGER STIFFER ERECTION that goes the distance. Tocopherol may be the answer for you. Tocopherol is completely safe for human human consumption and approved for sale by the Federal Government. Send for a trial supply today. You could be giving your sex life a tremendous boost.

DAYTON & TAWNI

GOLDEN PINK

HUSTLER CLASSIC
JANUARY 2002

FRESH MEDIA

Alone in the mansion, Tawni is finally free to drill Dayton's well-kept pussy. "Is your husband's prick as big as mine?" queries Tawni, lubricating her strapon with spit.

"No, but he's richer," Dayton giggles. Laughs become yelps when Tawni returns the jab by plunging the plastic dong deep inside her gold digger friend.

"You think you're funny now, but when I'm done with you, you'll be limping all the way to the bank."

VEGAS, BABY!

It's the industry highlight of the year, a week of nonstop parties and debauchery. Welcome to the Adult Entertainment Expo, where the porn stars come out to play. Grab a seat ringside for an intimate BTS look at your favorites. Talk about wild, crazy-ass Vegas sex! Photography by Steve Prue.

RON WHITE

For 32 years "Tater" has killed on the road, culminating in the Blue Collar Comedy Tour. The hilarious Mr. White took a break from headlining in Vegas recently to chill with HUSTLER, plying us with his extraordinary anejo and regaling us with tales of a life lived large. Interview by T.S. Farley. Photography by Curtis Joe Walker.

PETITE MASSAGE

That old adage, good things come in petite packages, definitely rings true with Emma Hix, Norah Nova, Riley Star and Emily Willis. Hook up with these delightfully tiny tarts, and you're sure to have a happy ending. Photography courtesy HUSTLER Video.
